SOMERSET STRIKE BEING KEPT ALIVE BY UNION POLITICS

John Brophy, President of District, Anxious to Succeed Lewis.

"SPOTTING" THE COUNTY

With Small Groups of Strikers So as to Give District More Votes in the International Convention; Costing Miners $15,000 to $50,000 a Month.

Special to The Courier.

SOMERSET, May 28.—Politics within the United Mine Workers of America costs miners in a single Pennsylvania District from $15,000 to $50,000 a month in direct taxation, through the "check-off," according to J. S. Brennen, secretary Somerset County Coal Operators' Association.

"It is common knowledge that John Brophy, president of District No. 2, Central Pennsylvania, is a candidate to succeed John L. Lewis as president of the United Mine Workers of America," Mr. Brennen said in an interview here. "Brophy has his hat in the ring.

"In 1922, Brophy, acting on orders from the international headquarters in Indianapolis, called a strike in Somerset county, notwithstanding the fact that since 1901 Somerset has been solidly non-union.

"At the same time District No. 5 called similar strikes in Fayette and Westmoreland counties, also non-union.

"All three strikes failed hopelessly and in the late fall of 1922, the national organization, through President Lewis, called the strikes off, refusing further financial aid from the national organization treasurer.

"The president of District No. 5 at once declared the strikes off in Fayette and Westmoreland counties.

"John Brophy, president of District No. 2, declined to call off the strike in Somerset county and continued to support the strike by means of a check-off from his own district, which includes Somerset.

"In April, 1923, Brophy intensified his efforts to maintain an outlaw strike in Somerset county without the approval or consent of his national organization and continues to support his outlaw strike with funds derived out of miners' pay by having their employers check the money off against the miners' accounts.

"It has been carefully estimated that it has been costing District No. 2, Central Pennsylvania, between $15,000 and $50,000 a month to support the Somerset outlaw strike since its abandonment by the national union organization last fall.

"The constitution of the United Mine Workers of America, Article XII, Section 2, states, 'Representatives to the International convention shall be elected directly from local unions they represent, and shall have one vote for 100 members or less, and one additional vote for each 100 members of major fraction thereof, but no delegate shall be allowed more than five votes.'

"There are in Somerset county 13,-00 non union mine workers employed at a scale of wages higher than the union scale. There are, by actual count, on strike in Somerset county 1,157 men.

"Brophy is skillfully spotting these 1,157 strikers all over Somerset county in small groups. Each small group, some of them not numbering more than 10 or 12, constitute, under the United Mine Workers' own constitution, a local union. All of these so-called locals, engaged in an outlaw strike, are being supported by Brophy with union money.

"Under the United Mine Workers' constitution allotting a delegate to each local union for 100 members or less, it is obvious that it is to Brophy's advantage to spot his 1,157 Somerset county outlaw strikers in as widely distributed small groups and constitute these groups into local unions.

"In this way Brophy continues to increase the number of delegates among the 1,157 Somerset strikers. It follows that when these mushroom delegates attend the International convention having been living off union money handed out to them by Brophy, that they will vote on all questions as Brophy men."

"HEN" OPPERMAN SORELY TRIED BUT HE KEEPS SMILING

Henry Opperman's sunny disposition, which makes him popular among his friends, still prevails today although it was sorely tried over the week-end. "Hen" and a number of other members of the Unity Fraternity went to Guard, Md., Saturday night and by the time the last of the crowd got home it was 3 o'clock this morning.

A bearing burned out on Opperman's car going down the Humbertson hill near Somerfield on the outward trip. A greater part of the day yesterday was spent in reparing the car but Henry kept his smile. After a few hours in the country the crowd made ready for the return trip. Humbertson hill again proved the waterloo. Another bearing burned out on the climb. Henry might have said something but he smiled. He hailed a passing car and smiled himself into a ride to Uniontown.

The jinx pursued him however, and before the countyseat was reached a rear wheel came off the car in which he was riding. It resulted in more delay. Meantime six other fellows who were in Opperman's car had to be home to fill their Sunday evening dates. The unfortunates in addition to Opperman were Homer Edmunds, Charles Driscoll, Haud Shank, Eugene Peterson, James Cypher and Daniel Springer.

Opperman and Driscoll rode from Uniontown to Connellsville on a street car and got another machine to be used as a tow. When they finally got back to the stranded car only Springer and Shank were remaining. The others got rides in. Going downhill, to save brake linings, it was necessary to let the crippled car drift and when the Summit mountain was reached Opperman hitched on behind and held back. The week-enders got home in time to get a few hours sleep before daylight.

The Unity Fraternity has rented a house in Maryland and the first visitors to the place are not going to forget their initiation.

WISCONSIN DOCTORS CLAIM DISCOVERY OF PARESIS CURE

CHICAGO, May 28.—Paresis, the brain disease which is responsible for a large percentage of insane hospital inmates, has been permanently cured through the use of a newly-discovered drug called tryparsamid, according to an announcement made today at Madison, Wis. Through grants made by the Public Health Institute of Chicago, Dr. A. S. Loevenhart, head of the department of pharmacology, University of Wisconsin, and Dr. W. F. Lorenz, chief of the Wisconsin Psychiatric Hospital, have conducted experiments for several years, leading to the discovery of the cure.

Treatment of 42 cases of advanced paresis, in which the sufferers had been committed by court order to institutions, resulted thus far in half of them being returned to society, fully capable mentally, and providing for their families instead of being a care to the community. Two cures resulted from the ravages of locomotor ataxia, and restored them to the community.

In 11 cases of early paresis, which would have placed the victims in institutions, cures were effected, according to the doctors' report.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 27.—Coincident with the announcement from Madison that a serum for the cure of paresis in early stages had been discovered, it was learned here today that several patients had been treated at the County Hospital here, and had been discharged as cured.

B. & O. Breaks Record For Moving Freight

By Associated Press

CUMBERLAND, Md., May 26.—For the past week or more the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has been breaking records for movement of freight over the Cumberland Division, an average of 8,000 loads passing through Cumberland daily. This is the heaviest business handled in the history of the road. Yesterday 8,665 loads of mixed freight were moved over the Cumberland Division, a large portion of which was coal from the West Virginia fields.

Most of the through freight comes from the west over the Connellsville Division and with the coal received from the West Virginia fields, is moved to Curtis Bay for foreign shipment, or to Eastern Cities of New England points.

BISHOP POST AND CITIZENS HONOR WORLD WAR DEAD

Names of 83 on List of Service Men Who Have Crossed Divide.

WASHINGTON MAN SPEAKS

Members of Milton L. Bishop Post, the American Legion, and hundreds of Connellsville citizens attended the memorial exercises held Sunday afternoon at the Connellsville High School Auditorium in honor of the soldiers who fought and died in France and those who have since died.

The ceremonies were impressive. The program, in addition to the memorial address, included vocal and instrumental numbers. The names of 83 service men who have answered the last call were read.

The calling of the roll was one of the most impressive ceremonies. As each name was read aloud by Earl E. Shank, post adjutant, Post Commander Max C. Floto sounded his gavel. After the last name the body of former service men arose and stood at attention while taps was sounded.

L. McK. Crumine, past senior vice-commander of the American Legion, Department of Pennsylvania, was the principal speaker. He spoke of the exercises as "an expression of the reverence and respect we hold for the men who answered their country's call when their country had need of them."

"Our desire," he said, "is to commemorate the service of these men who are no longer with us for they gave their all.

"These men whose lives and deeds we are commemorating responded to their country's call not because they were looking for new worlds to conquer but because they held uppermost those ideals which are grounded into our lives—our Americanism. The greatest monument we can erect to their glory is for each of us to resolve that as American people we will accomplish still greater things for the good of humanity."

Other parts of the program included:

Opening address by Max C. Floto, post commander; invocation by Rev. E. A. Sharp, vocal duet, "The Beautiful Valley of Peace," Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas; "The Voice Beyond," poem, by its author, Correll J. Poole, dedicated to deceased comrades; prayer by Rev. G. W. Buckner; vocal solo, "God Shall Wipe Away All Tears," Lester Crawford; vocal solo, "There Is No Death," Ray McClintock; benediction Rev. W. H. Herrick; selections by Kiferle's Orchestra.

In addition to the names published Saturday the death roll contains those of Earl Detling, Roy Helms, George Means, William Marietta, Norman P. Ritenour and William F. Sheran.

Somerfield Will Talk Community High School At Rally This Evening

Special to The Courier.

SOMERFIELD, May 28.—A meeting will be held in the Methodist Episcopal Church of Somerfield this evening to consider the erection of a new school for the borough. A site is already in view but has not yet been secured.

County and state school officials are expected to attend the meeting and outline the course to be followed.

The school attended by Somerfield students recently burned down and the new building to be erected is for those classes. The borough's energetic citizens, however, are interested in the erection of a high school at this place, to be attended by students from the community for miles around. At present the students travel long distances to Confluence, Friendsville and Uniontown. It is felt that a community high school at Somerfield would overcome this necessity.

A petition for such a school has been signed by every citizen of Somerfield with the exception of one man. With so much support in Somerfield for the institution it is likely the building proposition will go through, the feeling prevailing that students will go to the school there rather than travel to Confluence or Uniontown.

Regardless of the tuition of students who might attend it is regarded as a sensible proposition for Somerfield alone. The borough pays nearly $500 a year now in tuitions to other school districts because of not having a high school. It is felt this sum will be increased in future years and for that reason a high school at home is preferred.

A site now being considered for a school faces the Youghiogheny river and will allow considerable space for a playground. The site of the burned school is along the National Pike and is not considered safe, passing automobiles endangering the lives of the students.

Sam Coleman Buried by Sand Soon Rescued

Sam Coleman, colored, met with an unusual experience this morning while unloading a car of sand at the sand bins of the Yough Coal Company in South Arch street. Sam was on top of the car when suddenly the bottom gave way and Sam took a trip down through the chutes into the bin with the car load of sand on top of him. Workmen nearby saw the accident and started digging Sam out.

The police station was notified and Chief Peter M Murphy sent every able bodied man he could find to the rescue. It took about two minutes to reach Sam and he was none the worse for his experience, except that he got his eyes and mouth and ears full of sand.

WORLD GROWS BETTER, BLOODSHED NOT VAIN, REV. STEVENS DECLARES

The world is growing better. It is not as bad or selfish or greed as in the days of Julius Caesar. Thus spoke Rev. E. H. Stevens during the delivery of the annual memorial sermon to the small remaining squad of the Grand Army of the Republic in Connellsville at the First Baptist Church Sunday. There are those who say the world is growing worse, he added, but declared "it's a lie."

The blood shed in the Rebellion and on the fields of France was not shed in vain, he told the veterans of the Sixties. "It takes a long time to educate a nation to a standard. It takes a long time to educate a child," but the end will be reached, he indicated.

Speaking of the principles involved in the struggle between the North and the South he said those for which the boys of America went to France were one and the same.

Less than a dozen of the Boys in Blue were at the service. There are few more to be counted. Two or three were unable to be there because of illness, among them Lyman S. Strickler who was taken ill Sunday morning. Those who occupied seats were Commander W. P. Clark, J. F. Jones, C. H. Whiteley, W. H. Shaw, J. J. Barnhart, E. Dunn, John Robinson, Irvin Giles, Charles Hill and A. H. Brashear. Members of the Ladies' Auxiliary sat with them.

The church was beautifully decorated, especially the pulpit and the space back of which were bedecked with flags. The choir rendered special musical numbers.

Osborn, Ralph Gillo, J. W. Sutton and J. M. Cecil. On Mr. Wilhelm's team are W. L. Wright, D. L. Morgan, H. C. Barrow, D. T. Miller, W. F. Russell, David Jones, C. A. Gillo, R. C. Dunn, William Thomas, E. G. Hall, William Cecil, E. J. Smith and B. B. Smith.

The first games in the league will be played this evening on the club grounds near the Armory, starting at 6:30 o'clock.

Auxiliary Sells 3,000 Poppies

The poppy sale conducted by the ladies of the American Legion Auxiliary and High School girls on Saturday was a pronounced success. The entire stock of 3,000 flowers was disposed of during the day and early hours of the evening. It is thought fully 2,000 more could have been sold had the flowers been on hands and the sale continued over today.

COMMUNIST REIGN OF TERROR SPREADS IN GERMAN FIELDS

Reds Resort to Robbery of Citizens in Streets of Dortmund.

FIGHTING GROWS SEVERE

Dispatch to Berlin Paper Claims 2,000,000 Miners and Tens of Thousands of Other Workers Have Joined in the Ruhr Strike.

By Associated Press.

ESSEN, May 28.—Disorders in the Ruhr on account of the strike and Communist activities appear at present to be centered in Dortmund where the inhabitants passed a night of terror, and the Communistic element today was still striving for the upper hand.

Worst guards there took up positions in the streets and searched all passers by ostensibly for firearms but in many cases their money and valuables had been taken. Numerous fights grew out of the searching and a large number were hurt.

The terrorist methods at Dortmund were preceded by bitter fighting between the Communists and the police at a nearby mine when Communist pickets tried to force the pump men to leave so that the mine would be flooded. Police attacked the Communist forces and drove them away after two police were killed and 11 wounded, one fatally. The Communists left two dead on the field and carried many wounded away. They were armed with hand grenades which they used effectively, the police reported.

The strike is spreading into the Rhineland. At Duisburg the metal workers went out today. The situation at Hamborn is so serious that the authorities have prohibited the sale of alcoholic drinks. Other industrial centers are considering similar action. At Dusseldorf the police clashed today with striking street car and gas works employes in which one workman was killed and a number were wounded.

BERLIN, May 28.—Two million miners and tens of thousands of metal workers are on strike in the Ruhr, according to a dispatch to Vossische Zeitung. Although these figures are probably grossly over-estimated it is believed that undoubtedly every mine center in the Ruhr is idle as a result of the tactics of the Communists who are visiting the pits and ejecting the workers.

A vote taken in the Bochum district showed a majority of the miners favored resumption but Communist pickets are stationed at some of the pits with fixed bayonets to prevent the miners from descending.

COURT WILL HAVE SINGLE DAY RECESS; JUNE TERM MONDAY

What Attorney E. C. Higbee, speaking in behalf of the Fayette County Bar Association, termed a "breathing spell" in the common pleas grind was denied today by Judge J. Q. Van Swearingen, who ruled that court will recess for Memorial Day and reconvene the following day. Mr. Higbee urged the court to order a recess of a week. He called attention to that fact that court has been in session almost continuously since December 1 and that there is a congestion of cases.

The motion was offered at the beginning of the 13th and final week of common pleas court. All but two of the cases listed for the day were reported as settled. The one remaining on the list were minor ones.

Following close on the civil list the June term of criminal court will be ushered in Monday, June 4. It will continue throughout the month.

A decree nisi was granted in the divorce suit of Andrew Morrow of Uniontown against Josephine Morrow. The libel was filed on April 27 and since that time the parties have settled their differences.

After progress in the case of Walter Bleter against the County of Fayette to collect for extra work on bridge No. 72 near Mount Pleasant a compromise was agreed upon and the jury awarded the plaintiff $3,749.96. The commissioners did not question the extra work but contended that the amount claimed, $7,500 was excessive.

CROWNING OF MAY QUEEN WITNESSED BY HUNDREDS

The retreat held in the Immaculate Conception Church by the Young Ladies Sodality closed last night with the crowning of the May Queen. During the evening members were received into the Sodality and the Children of Mary. The service was beautiful and unusually impressive and was attended by hundreds of persons who thronged the church in an effort to view the procession in which four hundred, including the Children of Mary and Sodality candidates and attendants, took part. The ceremony opened with the procession down the main aisle of the church. Miss Clementine Rottler, prefect of the Sodality, was crowned Queen of May, and she in turn placed on the statue of the Blessed Virgin Mary, a crown of smilax and lilies of the valley. Miss Rottler was attended by eight small girls who carried the crowns on blue and white satin cushions. After the crowning the procession proceded around the church and garlands and flowers were placed at the shrine of the queen. Candidates then received their badges and medals as symbols of their order. Benediction was then read by Rev. Father Henry Golbel, pastor of the Immaculate Conception Church, as celebrant, Rev. In Loving Memory.

Of Ethel M. Swallop who died one year ago today, May 28, 1922.

Lonely are our hearts today
For the one we loved so dearly;
She bade no one her last farewell,
She waved her hand to none.
Her spirit fled before we knew
That she from us had gone.
God called her home—it was His will,
And in our hearts she liveth still.

Sadly missed by father, mother, brothers and sisters. Mr and Mrs. George Swallop, 217 North Eleventh street, Connellsville, Pa.—Advertisement.—28may1t*

...DD SOURCE OF INSPIRATION

...ethoven Said to Have Found Motif in the Persistent Sound of Door Knocker.

To an ordinary mind it would surely seem impossible that much music could be got out of a door-knocker. Yet it was this sound which is said to have inspired Beethoven's glorious violin concerto in D. As the musician lay awake one night shaping the concerto in his mind, his musings were interrupted by a belated neighbor who was endeavoring to arouse his housekeeper and get her to come down and let him in. Beethoven heard his persistent knocking for admission—the slow deliberate knocks at a time, the constant repetition gave the composer the idea he sought and those four knocks are heard all through the opening movement of the concerto, which begins with four unaccompanied notes on the drum—seemingly as undistinguished and unpromising an opening phrase as one could imagine. In commenting upon the circumstance Sir George Grove has said "those four notes were to Beethoven what the milk of the old Temeraire was to Turner, or the daffodils to Wordsworth—common place in themselves, but transfused by the fire of genius into an imperishable monument."

Vanishing American Birds.

One of the most remarkable exhibits in the habitat group in the American Museum of Natural History is the nest of a duck hawk on a shelving rock on the Palisades, with the rocky upper cliff of nature stretching in the background and the placid river below.

It deserves to be ranked as a work of art—this glimpse of the bird life of New York's beauty spot—as, in fact, are all the exhibits in the habitat group.

As one enters the booth in which the scene is installed, one finds it hard to believe that he is looking at a combined work of the artificer and the painter, and not on the actual shelving rock hundreds of feet above the Hudson, with the mother-bird poised in the summer air, hovering over the nest with the food for her young clasped in her claws.

And the duck hawk is still to be found—or was to be found there in 1926, when three pairs were nesting across the river from the city's hubbub.—Exchange.

SEIZED SWIMMER AS PREY

English Boy Compelled to Fight Off Voracious Pike That Evidently Was Hungry.

The pike is generally considered the hungriest of fish. Fish, flesh and fowl seem alike acceptable to its palate, and it does not disdain mineral products; rings, spoons and other similar articles have been frequently taken from its maw. Four English boys went to bathe in Inglemore pond, near Ascot, in England. One of them, who shall be called Tommy, walked into the water about the depth of four feet, when he spread out his hands and tried to swim. At that instant a large fish came up and took the whole hand into its mouth, but finding itself unable to swallow it relinquished its hold, and the boy, turning round, prepared for a hasty retreat. His companions saw the fish, scrambled out of the pond as fast as possible. Tommy had scarcely turned around before the fish came up behind and, seizing the other hand crosswise, inflicted some very deep wounds on the back of it. The lad raised his free hand, which was still bleeding, and struck the great fish a hard blow on the head, when it disappeared. The other boys took him to a surgeon, who dressed seven wounds in one hand, and so great was the pain the next day that the lad fainted twice. The little finger was bitten through the nail and it was more than six weeks before it was well.

...INSISTED GIFTS BE BROUGHT

Powhattan Conceived It to Be Beneath His Dignity to Go to Receive Them.

The Indian name of the sagamore or ruler who figured in the disputed story about John Smith being saved from death by Pocahontas, one of Powhattan's daughters, was "Wah-unso-na-cook." In 1604 Captain Newport came to Virginia with a gilded crown and orders from the king of England that Powhattan be crowned and declared "Emperor of the Indies." Captain Smith was then president of the Virginia colony, and as special ambassador of the British sovereign summoned Powhattan to Jamestown to undergo the ceremony of coronation. According to the story, Powhattan with dignity refused, saying "I also am a king; and if the king of England has sent me gifts they should be brought to me. I shall not go to receive them."

Newport, it is said, carried the crown and gifts to Powhattan; but no persuasion could induce the Indian monarch to kneel to receive the crown. Only by two Englishmen bearing down heavily on his shoulders could he be brought to something like a kneeling position to receive the crown. The act finished, a pistol was fired, and was followed by a salute from the boats in York river. Powhattan ruled over 30 Indian tribes, numbering about 8,000.

Transparent Creatures.

Among the curiosities of the animal kingdom are transparent animals. Recent studies of two larval eels which belong to one of the government bureaus at Washington seem to show that among the possible advantages of being transparent is listed economy in personal decoration.

In ordinary opaque animals the color markings are symmetrical on both sides of the body, but this is not the case with the transparent eels. When looked at from one side these eels appear to have seven large black spots arranged at nearly regular intervals along the length of its body; closer examination shows that in each case three spots are on the left side and four on the right side.

They are irregularly spaced, but in such a manner that on looking through the body all seven appear in a symmetrical row.—New York Herald.

Brilliant Idea.

A good old professor of astronomy wanted to earn a little money on the side. He needed it. But his ideas about business methods were nebulous. An astute layman suggested that he advertise classes in astronomy, with a stiff enrollment fee. The professor admitted that culture might be looking up, but expressed a fear that few men would care for instruction in astronomy.

"That's all right," persisted his friend. "Plenty of married poker players would like to get out a few evenings. You advertise your classes. I'll guarantee you get a satisfactory enrollment."

Brilliant Thought.

The tourist came back enthusiastic about the beauties of the Hawaiian islands. This one was no exception. He had a group around him and was telling all about the Hawaiian girls, how they wore grass skirts, garlands of roses and other floral articles of dress or adornment.

"And what do they wear in cold weather?"

He didn't know about that—hadn't seen any cold weather.

"I suppose in cold weather they wear furze," suggested one lady, sweetly.

Odd Work of Erosion.

Erosion has sculptured a profile of Abraham Lincoln out of the Colorado Rockies at Evergreen; Jumbo elephant at Palmer Lake, whistling swan in Platte canyon, Mother Grundy in Clear Creek canyon, human skull on the Skyline drive at Canyon City, sphinx head near Corona, wise owls in Estes park and listening lion in the Garden of the Gods at Colorado Springs.

PERTAIN TO MEN AND MULES

Only Known Animals That, Willingly and Unwillingly, Are Known to Wear Collars.

Collars are tubular articles of apparel worn about the neck by men and mules. The reason that the last named animal wears them is obvious. A collar consists of several square inches of linen made into a strangling noose and starched to add to its potency. Some are uprights, other grands and still others simply instruments.

They are of varying heights, according to the hardihood of the wearer, observes a writer for the New York Sun. Some men are so hardboiled that they wear collars with protruding points in front and play a game with them. The object of the game is to prevent the points from working through the under jaw and destroying the molars. Fortunately the collar does not often win and the stretching exercises incidental to the play are beneficial.

Many good farmhands have been ruined because of a burning ambition to wear a collar perennially. The problem of the exodus to the cities might be solved by a public exposure of the implement. For some reason office slavery is called white-collar work and those who do not carry the hod are said to be white-collar workers, but this is only a flowery figure of speech, the collar that will stay white on the job not having been made.

In families the men of which have worn collars for generations that unlovely protuberance known as Adam's apple is virtually nonexistent. Among those who have but recently joined the collar corps the old perambulating pippin puts up a hard fight, but is finally pushed back, to the evident discomfort of the windpipe. It is fortunate that only the air passage suffers and never the one through which food must travel.

ODD VARIETIES OF MEDICINE

Cobweb Pills Supposed Good for Ague, and Snake's Head Broth for Various Diseases.

The heads of venomous serpents have held an important place in medicine. A strong broth made from them and mixed with salt and spices, and one hundred other remedies, was employed under the name of theriac as a cure for every conceivable disease.

Curious survivals of this old belief in the efficacy of certain reptiles and insects as cures for human ills occasionally come to light, even in this advanced age. In New England, cobweb pills are supposed to be good for the ague, and in the South a certain knuckle bone in a pig's foot is a cure for rheumatism, if it be carried in the pocket or worn suspended from a string around the neck.

The spider-web pill originated in China, where all species of insects have certain positive or negative values in medicine.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sacred Horses in Jap Park.

In the famed park in Nara, Japan, there is a sacred horse. This shaggy, undersized animal is said to be about the funniest thing in Japan. He is pure white, and has one blue eye and one pink eye. He is kept in a small stable with a square hole for him to poke out his head to eat the oats which tourists bring him. The third largest bell in Japan hangs in Nara park, which contains 1,250 acres, and throughout which more than 3,000 stone and metal lanterns are scattered. Six hundred tame deer roam at will in the park.

Also in Nara park there is one of the three gigantic bronze Buddhas, and the largest. The others are at Osaka and Kamakura. One of the most venerated of Shinto shrines—Kasuga no Miya—is the goal of thousands of pilgrims every year. It has existed for 1,210 years.

Considerate of the Bank.

An English sailor just home from a long cruise entered a bank in Hull and greeted the clerk with: "What cheer, matey! How's your business doing, hey?"

"Not very brisk at present," answered the clerk, "but I hope to see it improve shortly."

"That's 'ard!" said the tar sympathetically. He fished out a check for £100.

"How'll you have it?" asked the clerk.

The sailor hesitated a moment, then leaned over the counter and said in a hoarse whisper: "Well, matey, I don't want to be 'ard on yer. Gimme ten pun' now and I'll take the rest a pun' a week."—Boston Transcript.

When He Remembered.

An absent-minded man came home one day after a heavy rainstorm very bedraggled and wet. His wife met him at the door, and as he greeted her he made the remark that he had forgotten his umbrella.

She was surprised to think that he even remembered that he had forgotten anything, and asked him when he had thought of it.

With a smile of satisfaction he replied:

"Why, my dear, when it stopped raining and I went to shut it."

Volcano Gives Lessons in Farming

A volcano in Alaska, far from most of America's farms, turned agricultural "instructor" a few years ago and staged an important demonstration of modern farming methods on a gigantic scale.

The story of this impersonal giant of the north which wrought its agricultural will on hundreds of square miles of territory, in a way to make the most influential county farm agent envious, is told by Robert F. Griggs in his recently published book, "The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes."

For years the Federal and State Departments of Agriculture and other advocates of better farming methods have been preaching the advantages of the "dust mulch." Keep down the weeds, keep in the moisture, and give your plants a chance" has been the slogan. When Katmai Volcano on the Alaska Peninsula blew its top off, it subjected the surrounding country to a "dust mulch" such as had seldom been seen before. Included in the "mulched" territory was the island of Kodiak whose green grasses supported herds of cattle and on which were a number of farms.

The mulch treatment was pretty heroic at Kodiak. Over much of the island the volcanic ash deposits were a foot or more deep. All vegetation except trees and bushes were blanketed, and when Dr. Griggs saw the country soon after the eruption it looked like a gray desert. His leadership of expeditions sent out by the National Geographic Society to study the volcanic region took him back to Kodiak in the following years, and he found a surprising transformation. Grasses were more luxuriant than ever before, put out earlier, and grew much higher. The large, luscious berries for which Kodiak was famous were bigger and more numerous than ever. Even the trees grew faster.

Most of the local observers jumped to the conclusion that the ash was a wonderful fertilizer. But when Dr. Griggs had the ash analyzed he found that it had about the fertilizing power of sharp quartz sand; as a fertilizer it was absolutely worthless. Then he gathered the evidence which showed that the remarkable growth of plants at Kodiak beginning a year or so after the ashfall was solely due to the action of the ash as a mulch. The heavy blanket of ash, it was found, smothered the many little weeds and grasses that were fighting for a place in the sun and were absorbing much plant food from the soil. The strong grasses and the larger plants with virile root systems continued to live, and when they began to grow again found themselves for the first time without competition. Living was easier, each survivor had a bigger share of the plant food and grew abnormally.

Dr. Griggs' book contains many illustrations showing the effect of the ash mulch on plant growth, including the cross-section of a tree showing that its growth in a single year after the fall of ash was as great as in three or four years before.

Other portions of the book relate to the exploration of the amazing features of the devastated region around Katmai Volcano, with its largest of active volcanic craters; and the discovery of the wonderful "Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes," a rival for the Yellowstone, which the United States Government has set aside as a National Monument.

LARGER ATTENDANCE AT MEMORIAL SERVICES.

While there was a larger turnout of veterans of the World War and of civilians at the memorial services held in the High School auditorium yesterday afternoon than at the same service a year ago, the number present was much less than the objects and purposes of the occasion required to make it truly representative of the sentiment of the people of the community, and as a means of better preparing us for the observance of Memorial Day.

It is not believed the people do not realize the importance of these exercises on the Sunday preceding the day set aside for decorating the graves of the dead. Apparently they are indifferent to the fact that the larger the attendance the more impressive do the services become. They remain at home or engage in some diversion, like an automobile ride, in preference to taking an hour or more of their time to give proof of their interest in the exercises which are designed to pay fitting tribute to the memory of the men who died in our country's service.

It has been pointed out that Sunday afternoon is not the best time for such service. Many persons who attend the regular services in the morning feel that they should have Sunday afternoon free to themselves, hence are indisposed to make engagements or take upon themselves obligations that will interfere with their preferences as to how to spend the time.

Noting this condition it has been suggested that next year the memorial services be held in the High School on Sunday evening and that all churches dispense with their evening services and join in taking part; that the choirs form a massed body of singers as an added attraction on the program.

There is merit in this suggestion to which careful consideration will no doubt be given by those who will have the memorial exercises of next year in charge, to the end that this will be made one of the most impressive services of the year, and thereby enable us all to catch from the veterans more of their fine spirit of patriotism and reverence for the memory of the heroic dead.

Owners of motor driven vehicles will fail to see the necessity for the enactment of the Metcalf bill requiring registration of title. The information to be given under the provisions of this bill, which Governor Pinchot has approved, is furnished the State Highway Department when application for owner's license is filed. Why it should be furnished again, and a fee of $2.00 exacted from each car owner, does not appear unless it be an attempt to place a new form of taxation upon car owners under the guise of registration of title.

When application for license is made sufficient data is given to establish ownership of the car for which license is desired. The new law can do no more in the matter of establishing title, hence it will appear to car owners as a duplication of records.

The claim is made that it will reduce the number of automobile thefts. Of this there must remain some doubt. Automobile thieves are a resourceful group of crooks. They are able to appropriate and sell cars with apparent immunity from arrest notwithstanding the ownership of cars is a matter of record in the license bureau of the State Highway Department and the re-sale of cars is already hedged about with certain regulations.

The establishment of a registration bureau will, in effect mean adding to the clerical force of the department to do practically the same work already being done there. This will mean more expense in operation of the department for salaries, supplies and record books and forms.

The registration fee will mean that the owners of car, estimated to reach 900,000 in number by the close of the year, will have paid the state the sum of $1,800,000 in addition to other millions for licenses. If the payment of the registration fee would accomplished the supposed purpose of making theft of cars more difficult, it might be regarded as supplementing protection provided by insurance placed on cars and there would be little objection to paying the additional toll for the privilege of owning cars. But inasmuch as registration of title is already in effect through the license system, and that does not appreciably lessen the activity of thieves, [illegible] will not be disposed to [illegible] hold up for another [illegible] for the duplication of a service already performed when they file application for owner's license. To car owners the fee will look very much like a new form of tax under another name.

Even the doubters are being convinced, by the brand of ball the Connellsville Independents are playing, that the First City of Fayette can keep first place in sports as well as other things.

PERMANENT.

T[illegible] are permanent things
[illegible] sings,
The [illegible] of the sky and the breeze
The bud and the leaf of the trees,
The [illegible] of dimpy streams
Glad youth with its hopes and its dreams,
The flash of the dew on the grass—
All these shall remain when we pass.

Forever the young men shall sigh
When she that he loves passes by
The stars shall shine down on the lane
While love tells its story again
The laughter of babes shall be sweet,
The brook and the ocean shall meet,
And centuries after we're gone
The rose shall be blossoming on.

Violets and daisies shall bloom
In spite of man's death and the tomb;
[illegible] shall hear with delight
The call of their mate at night
[illegible] to grave men shall fare
And each with his burden to bear,
All we have seen they shall see
All we have been they shall be.

Sorrow shall come with the night,
Joy with the days that are bright,
Men shall rejoice in their own,
Long after our spirits have flown!
They shall exult in success,
And grieve at the touch of distress,
Though nations shall flourish and wane,
The beauties of life shall remain.

Man's Conquest of Time

The progress of mankind, from the earliest recorded age, has been marked, by a ceaseless struggle against the limitations of time and space.

Civilization is mutual interchange of thought and the product of thought. This interchange demands transportation, hence the development of civilization has paralleled the improvements in transportation.

A useful lifetime should not be measured in hours lived, but in deeds done. Doubling man's productive capacity offers the same net result as doubling his period of usefulness or doubling the number of producers.

More than any other single factor of civilization, the automobile has multiplied the producing power of man, by decimating time and distance, and by providing a broad and flexible means for the transportation of men and their products.

The amazing growth of the automobile industry could not have been, had not the automobile more than justified itself as an economizer of manpower, a stimulator of production and a creator of wealth.

BROUGHT BIG MAN TO TIME

Showing That Spirit Can Be Triumphant Over Bully With Only Beef and Muscle.

A Big Man tried to bully a Little Man. The Big Man was a coward, of course, because he depended upon his physical superiority to back his policy. The Little Man, being a Man, what there was of him, spoke to the Big Man, as follows:

"You great big cowardly beef! You think you're a Man, but you're just a beast with clothes on. You haven't got as much manhood as a baby louse. If you weren't twice as big as I am, you wouldn't take a chance, because your heart is afraid, and you're a coward, and a liar, and a bum. Now, you're going to take it back and apologize or I'm going to tell you a lot more of what I think about you. Then I'm going to drive my fist into your face, if I can get up high enough to reach it. And I'm going to take a licking if I have to, but I'm going to be a bigger man than you are, with both eyes closed and three ribs gone! And if I can't lick you today, I'm going to try again tomorrow, and I'm going to keep on coming back until I've equalized your beef with my brain. Got it?"

The Big Man apologized.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Had to Whistle.

"Since prohibition went into effect churches have been having difficulty in obtaining wine for sacramental purposes, and a little negro church in the South was no exception," says Thomas R. Marshall, former vice president. "The pastor finally, after going the rounds, called on some of the sisters of the church to make some wine which could be used.

"One old negro woman said she would provide the wine, but when she went to find something to make the wine out of the only thing she could find was persimmons. So she made persimmon wine.

"Everything went all right at the church the day of the services and all the brothers and sisters partook of persimmon wine. The only trouble was that when it came to the doxology everybody had to whistle."—Chicago Daily Journal.

LAST POSTAL EMPLOYEE RETURNS FROM COBLENZ

The war is over now in the minds of the Post Office department, for Walter D. Wiseley, the United States agent at Coblenz and the last postal employee to leave Germany, has arrived in Washington to make his final report on the A. E. F. postal service. Wiseley left the postal service in this country for A. E. F. postal service five years and two months ago, and stayed until the last American left Germany.

THOUSANDS OF LAND TITLES UNDELIVERED

Government Locates 117,000 Stray Patents, Covering Millions of Acres.

Thousands of titles to public lands in Mississippi, Louisiana, Florida, Alabama and Missouri, covering millions of acres and dating back as far as 1800, have never been delivered to the homesteaders concerned. An investigation of claims and titles by the interior department has shown a surprising number of instances where original patents have never been received for lands handed down from generation to generation.

A compilation made recently of these undelivered land patents, now being forwarded to the Department of the Interior, shows that approximately 117,000 were unearthed in the land offices of Baton Rouge, La.; Jackson, Miss.; Springfield, Mo.; Montgomery, Ala., and Gainesville, Fla. Of this total, 80,000 came from land offices at Montgomery and Springfield.

Plans of the interior department call for the filing of these patents with the land cases upon which they were based in the general land office not only for safe keeping, but also that they may be delivered in case they are ever called for. It is estimated that they represent 17,720,000 acres of former public lands in the states of Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Alabama and Florida upon which the original owners never took up their patents.

An explanation of this large number of undelivered patents is based upon the habit of homesteaders, in former years, of regarding the final certificate issued by the land office and transferring the land covered by their entries as sufficient proof of ownership, without the land patent itself. Another cause is the fact that it was not the practice in the earlier days of the Republic to notify the entrymen when their patents had been issued. This has since been corrected and local land offices now see that homesteaders are informed when their patents come from Washington.

Shoes in Colors Match the Dress

Various Tones Used Singly and in Combination With Others.

Bootmakers are among the most versatile people in the world. Even the dressmaker of today, notes a Paris fashion writer in the New York Tribune, is scarcely able to keep pace with the modern shoemaker in clever ideas. There apparently is no end to the original things that he can do.

The colors seen in shoes naturally follow those in dresses. All the gray and brown tones are used singly and in combination with one another. The grays range from the shade known as silver gray to smoke color, and the browns from fawn to the darker cocoa shades. Otter is particularly popular at the present time.

In the novelty class are shoes made of bright-colored kid. It has been some time since slippers of colored kid were worn to any extent. All the greens, reds and browns seen in dresses are reflected in the newest footwear of this sort. Not every woman will have the courage to appear in shoes of bright green or red, but the dark blue and bottle green shades will no doubt become popular, even with the more conservative woman. Colored kid is used for trimmings, such as tongues, inserted strips and heels, as well as for entire shoes.

To start an epidemic of color in clothes is like upsetting hundreds of dye pots. Even as far-reaching as shoes is the influence of bright-colored prints, which show no sign of waning.

At the recent International Silk exposition representatives of the exclusive shoe shops of America were to be found mingling in the booths searching for printed materials from which to make shoes for the coming summer.

Cut-steel shoe ornaments are having a tremendous vogue in Paris at the present time. So great is the demand for these that manufacturers are charging as high as 250 francs for a pair of shoe buckles, and the retail price is often double this.

These ornaments are in oval and in closed designs. They are so large that they exaggerate the size of the foot, especially since they are placed directly on the instep of the high-tongue or gaiter style of shoe.

A season of great extravagance in all forms of shoe buckles and tongue ornaments made of cut steel, rhinestones and bronze is upon us. This probably sounds the knell of the strap slipper or sandal type. If the strap remains, the chic of the shoe must lie in a buckle or similar ornament. Gold tassels or pendant ornaments studded with brilliants are seen on the newest evening slippers.

Two Extremes Noted in the Smart Frocks

Smart frocks seem to go to either of two extremes. They may stress one tone or introduce bright touches of color. There's a feeling for odd bits of color in spring models. Sometimes it's narrow strips of colored embroidery down the back and front. Sometimes, again, these odd inserted strips appear at the sides where the seams of the frock would be.

In an ultrasmart dress of dark navy cloth, crystal beads make the only bit of color. They appear in several slender lines about the bateau neck and sparkle into a dashing design at the front.

Black and White Used in Chic Sports Outfit

A new idea in sports wear is this combination of black and white checked worsted coat, with a white flannel skirt, knife-plaited. To complete the outfit goes a white hat with green and black trim.

FARM POPULATION IS FALLING OFF

Boll Weevil and Low Price of Wheat Partly Responsible.

GOVERNMENT GATHERS FACTS

Hard times on the farm are causing a rapid shift of population. Last year no less than 2,500,000 people gave up the effort to get a living out of the soil and moved to town. To offset this, upward of 400,000 left town for the country, a loss of 2,120,000, or about 3.6 per cent of the whole farm population. The net reduction was not so heavy because there were 625,000 births on farms against 205,000 deaths. The final loss was 1.6 per cent, says the New York Times.

The low price of wheat in the West and the ravages of the boll weevil in the South were the two principal factors in this exodus. And the general depression of 1920 and 1921 had an especially depressing influence on farming. These conclusions and many other facts regarding the status of the American farm have been assembled by the Department of Agriculture in an effort to find out what is the matter with farm life.

Wallace Sees Hope.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace views the situation hopefully. The fact that in July, August and September of last year the movement from farms increased more than 100 per cent above normal reflected the prosperity of cities and towns, and he believes this movement was a "direct response to the willingness of the buying public to pay much higher prices for labor in the building trades, manufactures and industries than for labor on the farms."

Secretary Wallace also believes that the men who direct industry, commerce and finance are coming to realize more than ever before the necessity of bringing about what he terms a favorable adjustment for the farmer.

"They see the menace in conditions so unfavorable to agriculture as those of the last three years," he said. "They now understand more clearly that their own future is inseparably linked up with the farmer and that in doing what they can to help him get on his feet again they are helping themselves as well."

All the evidence shows that the problem of a decreasing farm population has to be solved. There was not a single group of states covered by the Department of Agriculture survey in which the farm population showed an increase. Looking over these groups one by one the story is the same from ocean to ocean and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf.

In the Middle Atlantic group—New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey—the farm population on Jan. 1, 1922, was estimated to be 1,880,000. Jan. 1 of this year it had decreased to 1,847,000. This took into account the excess of births over deaths, in the ratio of 43 births to every 18 deaths. If only the movement to and from farms had been considered it would have shown that the decrease was in excess of 100,000 persons.

Decrease Is General.

In the New England group, taking into consideration that births exceeded deaths by about 23,000, the farm population in the last year decreased from 540,000 to 527,000. In the South Atlantic group—West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida—the farm population decreased from 3,665,000 to 6,241,000, which indicated a net loss to agriculture in those great farming states of 124,000 persons. There were 231,000 births in 1922 against 64,000 deaths.

The next group, the East South Central—Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana—show a net loss of about 180,000 persons. In the West South Central group—Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas—the number decreased from 4,532,000 on Jan. 1, 1922, to 4,377,000 at the end of the year, a net loss of 157,000. As in all other groups the loss was largely reduced by the normal increase. There were 98,000 deaths and the number of births exceeded 44,000.

In the farming states of the Mid West, the West North Central group—Minnesota, the Dakotas, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri—the farm population on Jan. 1, 1922, was approximately 5,245,000. On Dec. 31 last this total had decreased to 5,101,000, showing a loss of 144,000. In those states births totaled 130,000 and deaths 39,000.

The East North Central group—Ohio Michigan, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin—on Jan. 1, 1922, had an agricultural population of 4,081,000. Of these, 145,000 moved into towns and cities in the year just ended. The babies again came to the front. Births numbered 135,000 and deaths 2,900.

In the West.

In the Mountain group of States—Idaho, Montana, Utah, Nevada, Wyoming, Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico—the loss by the movement from farms was 63,000, a decrease from 372,000 to 1,110,000. Births were 9,000 and deaths 7,000.

In the Pacific group—California, Oregon and Washington—it was expected that the farm population would show a substantial increase. Instead, it dropped about 47,000, a decrease from 907,000 on January 1, 1922, to 860,000 at the end of the year. Births numbered about 20,000 and deaths 9,000.

The Department of Agriculture has prepared two charts, one showing the trend of the movement to and from farms during the 50 years between 1870 and 1920, and the second trend in the three years that ended December 31 last. These charts show that the population was practically stationary in 1920. The trend to town became unmistakable in the latter half of 1921 and is still under way.

"Cities and towns are increasing at the average annual rate of about 4 per cent, and the farm population is decreasing at more than 1 per cent, taking into consideration the excess of births over deaths and all other favorable features.

Gray Silver, who directs the American Farm Bureau federation in Washington—the largest of all the farmer organizations—was asked to comment on the situation.

Farmers Are Discouraged.

"The Department of Agriculture's recent statistics," said Mr. Silver, "showing that one out of every sixteen farmers in the United States sold his farm last year, that the occupants of one out of every five farms moved either to other farms or elsewhere, and that 230,000 tenants discontinued farming altogether and sought some other occupation, proves statistically that the farmers have not been able to secure a proper return for their hard labor and the isolated life which they live.

"The Department of Agriculture has made public statistics showing that in a survey of 6,000 farms of more than average size, representing an average investment of $10,000 for capital and labor, the average owner-operator made the magnificent return of $917 in 1922. This return included $202 in inventories of crops, livestock and machinery, leaving only $715 available to pay mortgages, interest on investment and living expenses.

"For a number of years farmers have received a very low return for their labor when interpreted in terms of money, but the year just passed and the preceding year broke all records. Referring again to the Department of Agriculture's figures, as applied to the purchasing power of the farmer in terms of farm products, we find that during 1922 his 1913 dollar on the average was worth 99 cents and in November of that year it fell to 62 cents. The highest value throughout the year was in March, when it was worth 76 cents. In 1920 it was 80 cents. In the three war years the farmer's dollar advanced to $1.06, $1.12 and $1.11 respectively, but as an offset the wholesale price of other products advanced further. The wholesale price of commodities other than farm products and food were at $1.75, $1.56 and $1.05.

"All this grief has come to the farmer, although he is the most efficient man of his class in the world. It has come to him in spite of the many economies which he has practiced, in spite of his increasing employment of machinery and every labor-saving device available. He has been struggling to keep out from under the yoke of the European peasant with whom he is forced to compete.

Three Support Ten.

"In China it requires seven farmers to support ten people in the city. In the United States it requires only three. Until the last few years of unfortunate financial reverses our farmers have successfully competed with the millions of peasants and coolies of Europe. They have sold their wheat in the markets of the world on a world price basis and, by the use of machinery and the consequent small amount of man power per acre, have met their competitors at a common price.

"One of the greatest outstanding examples of the lack of progress, and what the United States might be if it had followed the same practices in regard to farming and industry, is in Egypt, where the farmers till the soil with the same kind of implements used 4,000 years ago. If we were to harvest all our wheat crop by the methods employed in Egypt, it would require 180,000,000 days, instead of 7,000,000 days driving modern machinery at full speed.

"The unprofitable returns from farming not only are reflected in the migration from farms, but in the shortage of labor, which seeks employment where more money is obtained with less effort and hardship. The Department of Agriculture's figures showed a shortage of labor on farms on April 1 of more than 11 per cent. This followed an excess of labor of almost that amount a year ago and an excess of 9 per cent on that date of 1921."

The government, executive as well as legislative branches, realizes the danger arising from desertion of the nation's farms and is giving study to the question in an effort to find some way to switch the rural population from its present minus position back into the plus column. This is one of the big things the new congress will try to accomplish.

BANK PAYS OLD CHECK

Bearer Had Carried It in His Pocket Nine Years.

After carrying a check in his pocket for nine years, William Hayes of Colusa, Calif., presented it for payment at a local bank. The check was given to Hayes by C. Cecil a resident of Colusa, by whom Hayes was employed.

Hayes carried the check and Cecil's accounts did not balance because of the check. A few days ago Hayes decided to present the check at the bank. When asked by the bank if the check was good Cecil replied, "As good as gold. Shoot it through."

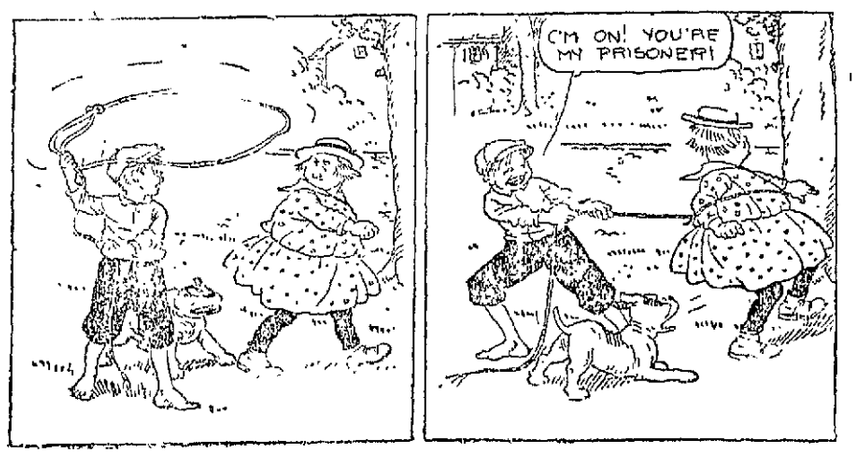

Shingled Fish.

Little Polly had been in the kitchen. Somebody asked her what she had been doing. "O," she replied, seriously, "I was out in the kitchen watching cook take the shingles off the fish."

Bricklayers Have Long Lives.

Masons and bricklayers are among the long-lived men, being exceeded only by blacksmiths and farmers, according to figures furnished by the United States Department of Labor.

RESIDENCE FOR TOWN OR FARM

This Imposing Structure Is Supplied With Many Rooms.

SQUARE HOUSE IS POPULAR

Roomy Veranda Extending Across Front of House Relieves Severity of Its Lines—Sleeping Porches Are Provided.

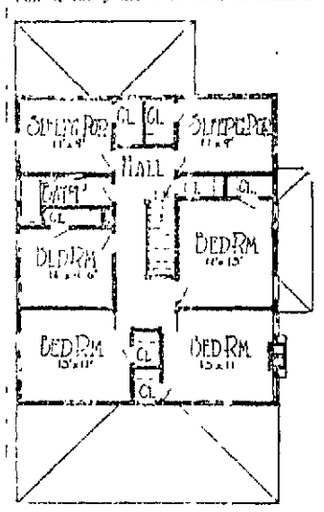

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

A square house like this is always sure to win favorable consideration with many intending home owners. Particularly is this true of this design, where the severity of the square structure is broken in on by the fine, roomy veranda that extends across the front of the house and the fireplace chimney and the dining room bay which appear at one side. Then again, the attic dormer is an aid, breaking in on the roof line as it does and cooling the upstairs through ventilation in the summer.

The dimensions of the house over all are 33 feet by 38 feet. There are 9 rooms, but if the downstairs breakfast porch and the two upstairs sleeping porches are taken into account, there are really three extra rooms—12 rooms in all.

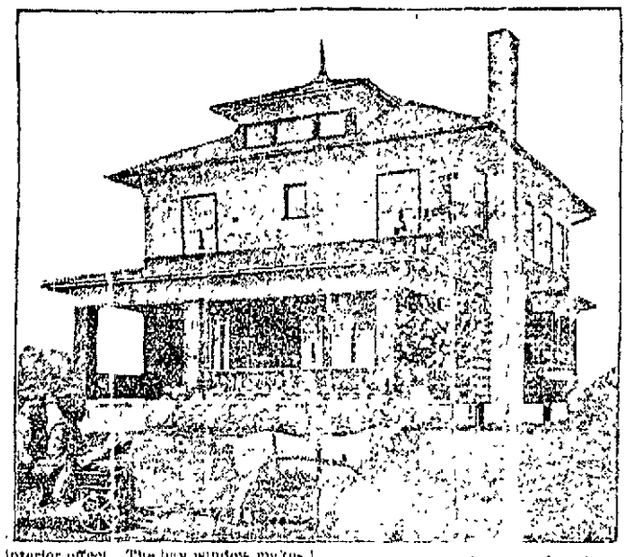

The living room extends all across the front of the house, has light on three sides and a fireplace at one end. Separating it from the dining room are glass doors, giving a very spacious and fitted with windows in winter, they lend themselves admirably to guest or family use, and would still more, if built-in beds were used. Observe that there is closet room which would permit this. For that matter there is ample closet space throughout the house, upstairs and down.

The exterior of the house is so finished as to avoid any impression of monotony. There is weather-boarding and vertical stripping for the first story and a few feet above it; then stucco, running with a smooth curve into the outward line of the cornice. This exterior finish is not arbitrary. Ordinary narrow siding could be used for the exterior, all the way with or brick; or stone, if available. Builders would make fine veranda posts and give distinction to the chimney and foundation.

interior effect. The bay window makes the dining room a very attractive place indeed and a general effect of lightness is had from the breakfast porch onto which the dining room opens, the entering doors to which could be of glass. Therefore, since the kitchen likewise adjoins the breakfast porch, the latter could be made to act as headquarters for the kitchen work after the first meal of the day is over. There would be a view right through the house to the front—a little thing, but worth considering if the house is to be built on a farm. Passing friends and neighbors on the road offer glimpses of interest that lighten the day's task immensely. Or, again, the view of the road could be had by turning the design around, with the porch facing the road.

The washroom, naturally indispensable on the farm if the housewife is to keep her housework within bounds, adjoins the kitchen. It opens into a lavatory and there are in addition ordinary wash tubs which do away with porch or basement washing inconvenience. The kitchen sink is right by the window, a place every woman would like the sink to be.

There is a downstairs bedroom that opens off the hall, and from which the occupant can go upstairs or to the downstairs lavatory without traversing the living quarters, a connecting door to the lavatory being possible through the separating wall.

This house calls for a spacious lawn before it to appear to the best advantage. Any farm house deserves a lawn before it, no matter how small. There are so many other places to put the vegetable garden.

FORM AN OPALESCENT HUE

Peculiarity Frequently Noticed in Globes of Electric Arc Due to Spheres of Silica.

A beautiful opalescence may sometimes be observed in the glass globes used to diffuse the light of the electric arc, particularly after such globes have been in use for a long time.

Close examination shows that the opalescence is due to the presence on the glass of minute spheres of silica, which have evidently been formed by volatilization from the glass under the influence of the electric arc. This effect is in accordance with the experiments of French scientists, whose electric furnaces have produced some surprising results.

The essential feature of the furnace is an electric arc of great intensity. When rock crystal, broken into fragments, is placed in the furnace it simply melts like so much ice, and in a few minutes the liquid thus formed begins to boil.

The vapor rising from the liquefied crystal is condensed into a little bluish-white cloud, from which tiny spheres of silica, glimmering with opalescent hues, are deposited. These spheres, as already remarked, are similar to those found on arc-light globes. The latter, of course, are the product of a very slow and gradual process, while in the electric furnace the volatilization is effected with rapidity.—Washington Star.

Wine Cellars Immense.

An idea of the size of the London wine vaults is conveyed by the fact that there are 21 miles of gangway running through them. Mitchell, the largest brewery in the port with a capacity of 21,000 tons only holds enough grain to make London's brand for one week.

Wanted More Information.

The medical officer on duty in the eye, ear and throat department of one of the great London hospitals was about to examine a man who complained of severe pain.

"Now, then, my friend, is it this ear that's causing the trouble?" he asked.

"This 'ere what?" inquired the patient.

RARE COIN COLLECTION TO BE MOVED TO CAPITAL

Invaluable Assortment in Philadelphia Mint to Have Home in National Museum.

The forthcoming removal of the Philadelphia mint's invaluable collection of coins, tokens and medals to the National museum in Washington has aroused a feeling of disappointment in the former city.

The collection, begun when the mint was established in 1792, is said to be one of the finest in the world. It comprises 1685 coins minted and used in the United States since the coming of the colonists. There also are thousands of other coins representing more than forty nations.

It is impossible to estimate the exact value of the collection, which includes specimens of the New England shilling, an almost plain silver disc, dating from 1651 and made in the first colonial mint, established at Boston without the authority of the English crown.

There are specimens of the "Franklin cent," minted in copper from 1787 on. Because of the expression, "Mind Your Business," engraved on the coin, it was thought Benjamin Franklin was responsible for the design. This has since been considered improbable. The coin was struck in New York by James Jarvis, with whom congress contracted to coin 300 tons of copper.

A rare five-eagle, or $50 gold piece, minted in 1877, is included in the collection, together with Ephraim Brasher's doubloon, struck by a New York jeweler in the Eighteenth century.

The greater number of coins are these from foreign countries. There are antique coins from Great Britain, France, Greece, Belgium, Norway, Sweden and other European countries. Some of these coins were minted by imperial cities, such as Augsburg and Bremen, as well as by bishoprics in Germany.

The collection contains three silver dollars minted in 1804; a half-dime of 1792, bearing an eagle flying and the words "Lib. Par. of Science and Industry—Uni. States of America"; gold coins struck in Philadelphia which bore for the first time "E Pluribus Unum"; coins which carried for the first time the words "God and Our Country."

There are also a large number of private gold coins minted near the mines.

PRESIDENT DECLINES TO MAKE SMALL COUSIN COP

Walter Hague, aged seven, of York, Pa., recently wrote his cousin, President Harding, asking Cousin Warren to give him authority to wear a badge inscribed: "Walter Dickerson Hague Has Permission to Do Police Duty After School in the Afternoon." Cousin Warren replied:

"Dear Walter: Miss Roszelle has sent me your letter asking me to grant you authority to do a little afternoon work on the police force. I am afraid the Yorkers would be doubtful about my right to intrude in this matter. I feel sure that a boy as big as you are and a Dickerson at that, ought to be thoroughly competent, but it is a little hard to get the regulations in such matters waived. I think the best thing for you is to wait until you grow about two feet taller, and then you will probably be able to get on the force if you still want to do so."

GREAT LIGHTS TO GUIDE AIR MAIL

Five Enormous Beacons to Mark Path Across Continent.

COAST TO COAST IN 26 HOURS

Beginning in July or August, the air mail will inaugurate continuous service between New York and San Francisco, negotiating in 28 hours the 3,000 miles intervening, according to an announcement made by Postmaster General New.

Letters placed on the planes in New York just before noon will arrive in Chicago at sundown. Here a waiting pilot will take up the flight through the night, landing at Cheyenne just before dawn. A third aviator will climb the lofty tops of the Rockies and over the Sierras, reaching the Golden Gate before the sun sets for the second time since leaving the Atlantic shore.

In his statement regarding the continuous service, for which a year of careful preparation has been made, Postmaster General New said:

"As a result of the preparations undertaken during the last twelve months by the division of the air mail, the night flights between Chicago and Cheyenne, Wyo., will be made under conditions which offer scarcely more hazard than day flying. The pilot will be guided by a pathway of powerful beacons capable of piercing through difficult atmospheric conditions, pointing the way unerringly over the prairie to the terminal fields. Each plane will carry powerful searchlights available for forced landings in case of necessity. Emergency fields have been located and lighted every 25 miles on the route. In addition to these precautions and many others the practicability of night flying is insured by the natural advantages of the terrain over which the pilots must guide their planes. The plains country is, of course, noted for its loveliness, fortunately providing natural landing fields while the lack of humidity in the air lends this route to the illumination plan.

Huge Beacons to Mark Way.

"Millions of people in the Middle West will nightly witness an artificial aurora borealis, visible fully fifty miles from its source under good atmospheric conditions, when the night service of the air mail gets under way. This will be created by sweeping lights which will be established on the five regular fields, Chicago, Iowa City, Omaha, North Platte and Cheyenne. Each of these beacons will have 600,000,000 candle power.

"The air mail beacons will be quite different from the shore lighthouse beacons which guide the ships of the sea. To suit the needs of ships of the air they will swing around on the top of their towers, throwing a beam three degrees above the horizon, three complete revolutions being made every minute. Pilots can easily pick up these giant beacons and guide their planes to the field. The lights will be operated only at hours when a plane is expected.

"Not depending alone on terminal lights, the Post Office department is locating less powerful beacons every 25 miles along the route. Like their larger brothers, they will also swing around the horizon, but their visibility is limited to about thirty miles. These smaller beacons will mark the emergency landing fields to which a pilot can descend in case of necessity."

As a safeguard for the pilot flying at night in a low "ceiling"—that is, when the clouds hang low—flashing traffic lights, similar to those placed on streets, will be placed on the ground every three miles along the route. These lights will be directed toward the skies instead of along the ground. This will enable a pilot who might lose sight of the field beacons to trace from his plane several thousand feet in the air a narrow line of light stretching for miles over the earth.

Red Lights Mark Obstacles.

Buildings and other obstacles at the landing fields will be marked with red beacons to aid in negotiating a landing. Pilots will fly at a height which will make it easy for them to volplane to the nearest emergency field, should the engine go dead.

Mr. New said that since the department had anticipated a general use of the service by the public, it was regarded as probable that a special airplane stamp would be issued, a stamp which would be sold at a price commensurate with the service.

Air mail service has been in operation in the United States since May 15, 1918, when the Washington-New York route was established. This was followed by the New York-Chicago service. Two and a half years ago a transcontinental route was undertaken, but was not a through service, its purpose being to advance the mails. Mail planes, for example, would pick up late mails here, fly with them to Cleveland and place the sacks on the Chicago express train which left New York the night before.

LAND OF BEAUTY AND RICHES

Arctic Alaska Well Worth a Visit by the Tourist Tired of Ordinary Travel.

Great, wind-swept tundras. Far away in lonely grandeur, sharp peaks of snow crowned mountains. Silent lakes among the hills.

[illegible] like snow, drifting steps among the bushes. Reindeer browsing on silver gray moss. Fish darting like shadows in the streams. Squat figures of solitary Eskimos against the sky line. The throb of surf upon a desolate beach.

Flowers like jewels among the grasses. Soft, green mosses starred with tiniest blossoms. Glowing red vines clinging closely to Mother Earth. Blue berries hanging fairy bells on low bushes. Wild cranberries scattering red beauty for bird and beast. Tawny grasses and whispering willows waving in the wind. A tapestry of rich color in wild solitudes. A flaunting of dulcet perfume on boundless air.

Gleam of gold, soft tint of copper, sparkle of silver, dull thud of lead, glint of tin, glow of garnet—the bosom of Mother Earth bursting with riches.

Lovely, remote unknown, an [illegible] mountain tone in purity of crystal clear air, royal in wealth of exhaustless possessions.—Christian Science Monitor.

Time's Changes.

The hired man was tinkering around the barnyard. The patient churn had given him a cheap cigar and asked him how things were coming along.

"Different times," growled the hired man, "different times."

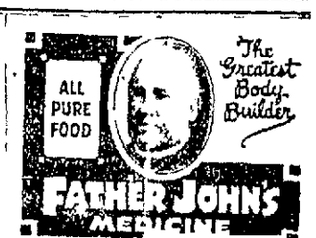

"What's the trouble?" asked the churn agent.

"I used to enjoy giving an apple to a horse."

"And now?"

"Well, I suppose the tractor is glad to see the oil can but it never whinnies with joy."

The San Antonio club recently gave Larry Cheney, veteran spitball pitcher, his unconditional release.

Plaits Mode Is One Well-Liked

Dresses, Blouses, Capes and Coats Are Graced by the Chic Decoration.

After the season has opened, after all of the startling things have been exhibited by both American and French designers, after fashionable women have had a chance to select with care those creations that they consider worthy of their notice, then comes a blending, an amalgamation of the two showings. And the ultimate result is not always what one might expect or wish it to be, observes a fashion writer in the New York Times. However, there is usually a large proportion of good sense incorporated in the union and enough of general good looks to make us all appear well dressed according to popular taste.

All this having been told, we must see to the various ways in which the general principles are carried out and in that process there is an inexhaustible fund for research and thought, not to mention experimentation.

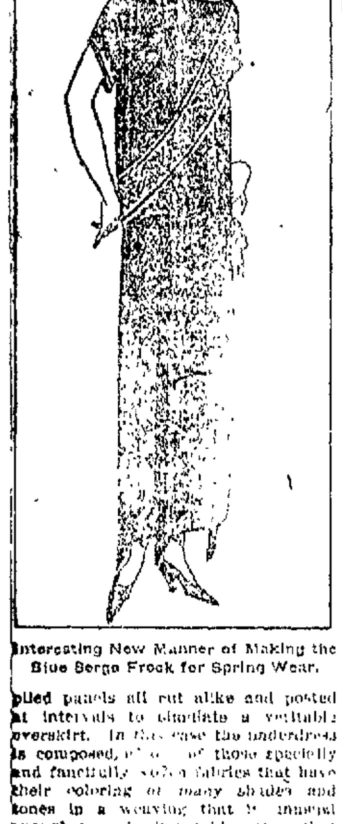

There are points about the American woman's figure which will not lend themselves to the lines of French clothes. They must necessarily be adapted and changed to our own lines and proportions, and while some of the designs are spoiled by the change others seem to take on an added interest. Then there are our own home-grown varieties, keyed to suit the American woman and no one else on earth. If one of these can be exclusive enough then it is a find, indeed. Sometimes the material makes it distinctive enough. Again, there are little variations in cut which accomplish the same end. There are all sorts of ways of achieving the goal when the undertaking is handled by an artist.

Straight Lines and Plaits.

Even the French designers find that the old standard lines are surviving with a persistence which they might wish otherwise. As fashions stand now, indeed, you cannot go wrong on the straight lines that have proved themselves becoming to your own style of figure.

Plaits, this season, have found a fast place in popular favor. There are whole dresses which are plaited. There are blouses laid in finely placed plaits. There are plaited inserts and plaited capes and plaited coats. And many of the frocks which are expressive of the season's styles have plaits incorporated in their making, but in such an astute manner that they almost look like flat portions of the gown. Only when any movement of the figure is shown is there a revelation of the fact that more fullness has been concealed under flat plaits than could possibly be visible at first sight.

A dress which is very pleasing shows that type of frock which is made with an underskirt of one [illegible] and an overdress made by the arrangement of applied panels all cut alike and posted at intervals to simulate a veritable overskirt. In this case the underdress is composed of [illegible] of those specially and fancifully woven fabrics that have their coloring in many shades and tones in a weaving that is unusual enough to make it notable. Over that flat foundation there is enough of blue serge to establish the frock as one of the blue serge company of the season. The trimming, so far as the skirt is concerned, lies underneath instead of on top as is generally the case.

Long, Straight Coat Worn.

As the spring days grow warmer, we see more and more of the long, straight coats upon the streets. Some of these are exquisitely embroidered, others are made of those brocaded stuffs, and still others are covered with [illegible] embroidery which is more or less beautiful [illegible] upon pattern [illegible]

Then there are the [illegible] longer coats made with some attention [illegible] detail design and provided with [illegible] that make them notable. One of these is in white for summer wear, made of a heavy white crepe, its little repeated petals of trimming being made of the selfsame material picoted around their edges. It is gracefully tied with a bow of the crepe at one side and the skirt of the coat falls into a drapery at that same side, which looks for all the world like the streaming end from the bow at the low waistline.

Collars on these longer coats are most interesting both as to cut and color-scheme of [illegible]. They are all more or less straight and folded and while some of them are of [illegible] others are trimmed with [illegible] embroidery or with a succession of tucks or with a layer of printed stuff or with silk of some shade that contrasts with the making of the coat. While the coat is straight and scant and slim, the collar and often the cuffs take unto themselves all sorts of widths so that they achieve a fullness and a general width for the coat which gives it style. This coat has accomplished this same end by using wide and gracefully falling revers in connection with the wide, trimmed cuffs.

The tailored suits have skirts that are split on one side. Indeed, they are very often real wrap-around skirts that leave an opening on the left side clear to the waistline, but with so much material left on the under side that they do not flare open. By this method they are kept tight and at the same time they offer all of the comfort and ease that a much wider and perhaps more bulky skirt might do.

The Hat of Wider Brim.

There are rumors that a hat of wider brim will be more the thing for warmer summer days, and really this is always the case as the sun shines more brightly. Therefore the information can be depended upon. But for these larger-brimmed shapes there will be only little spots of trimming, only combinations of color that create a subtle effect of trimming all by themselves.

The short coats, as the season advances or as the designers advance in their showings for the season become shorter and straighter. Although they are likely to be embroidered until every inch of space is covered, they are showing less and less of trimming or any applied decoration.

The hat that goes with this jacket, while it is an exaggeration of the mushroom shape with its trimming, none the less illustrates the fashion. It is made of brown straw to match the binding of the coat and the silk trimming has a lighter tone on the outside with the darker shade used for a facing. This trimming is subtly wired so that it retains its perkiness and debonnaire air through every chance encounter.

Americans have been severely criticized by foreign artists of dressing for their habit of dressing alike. They have been accused of looking like so many automatons as they walk upon the streets, for the reason that their clothes are cut over the same patterns, are keyed to the same color notes, are hung to just the same skirt levels, are fitted and adjusted as though measured to scale. It is a serious criticism from one angle, from the point of view of the old-world fashions. But then there is another consideration—that the American women may be, after all, evolving to a state where they will dress more in uniform than in any other way.

Little Change in Ten Years.

The other day an interesting woman who keeps what is known as a specialty shop was heard to give her opinion on the state of dressing as it exists now in America. "Do you realize," she said, "that during the last ten years there has been very little appreciable change in the dressing of the modern American woman? We have changed the length of the skirts, the placing of the waistline and the cutting and hanging of the sleeves, but for the rest the lines of the gown have remained, in the last analysis, uninterrupted and unchanged." It seemed like a startling statement—too broad to be true—but upon due thought and consideration she was found to be right. She had handled the clothes as they found their way into the wardrobes of American women and she happened to know what she was talking about.

Could Take It as He Pleased.

The irate customer shook his portrait in the photographer's face.

"Do I look like this picture? The thing's an outrage! Why, you've given me an awful squint and the look of a prize-fighting bully. Now, answer me, and no nonsense about it! Do you call that a good likeness?"

The photographer scanned the print, then looked at the customer. "The answer," he said, "is in the negative."

And the customer went away with a look of deep thought on his face.

River Celebrated in Song.

The Suwanee river, celebrated in the ballad "Way Down Upon the Suwanee River," rises in southern Georgia, in the Okefenokee swamp, and winds south-southwest about 300 miles, flowing through Florida into the Gulf of Mexico at Suwanee bay.

Thackeray and the Pantomime.

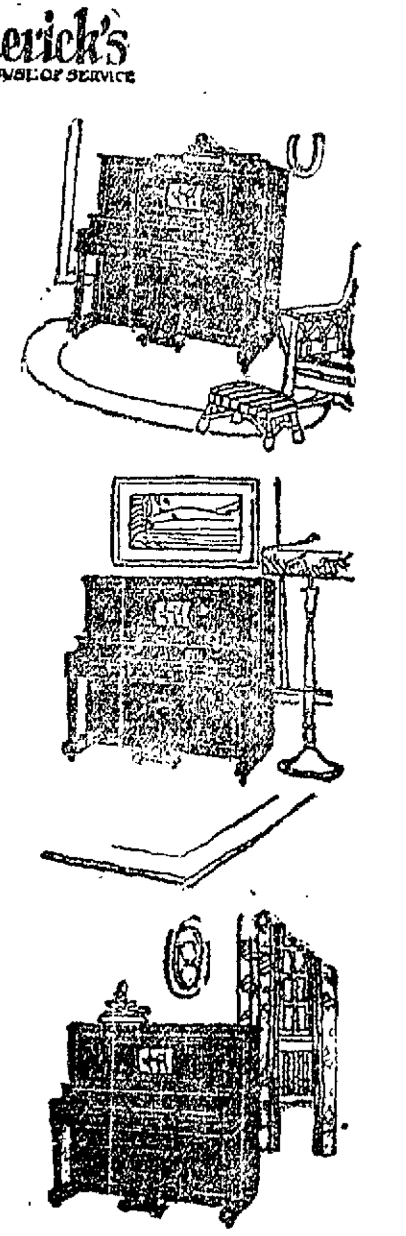

It is recalled that William Makepeace Thackeray was a fervent admirer of pantomime, and he never missed viewing one if he could help it. He admitted, though, that "very few men could expect to see all the pantomimes of one season."

THE HOUSE OF SERVICE

Mother —

Are you guiding them to an intimate friendship with good music?

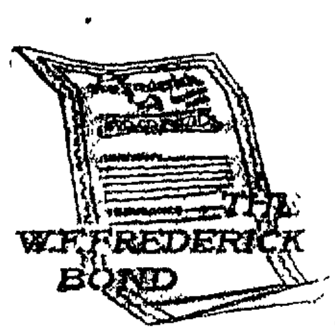

CONSIDER that baby whose first smile was directly into your eyes. Unconsciously, are you cheating that bright-eyed youngster—of a good influence which will help round out his character?

Do you realize what a vital part music holds in his life? How necessary it is that he should have music?

Read this important message from the National Child Welfare Association:

"Many parents think of music as a pleasant and ornamental but rather unnecessary educational 'frill.' We must recognize the child's right to music as a thing of value—as a power to brighten and fill his life. The study of music not only gives invaluable exercise to the mind—it also refines the whole nature."

On the Playerpiano you can play songs for the baby. Nursery rhymes that will make his eyes grow big and round with wonder—"Little Bo Peep"—"Humpty-Dumpty"—"Little Jack Horner"—"Jack and Jill"—etc. And then as evening draws nigh, a tender lullaby that lulls him off to slumberland.

INSURANCE FEATURES

Every Club member is given an Insurance policy. This is an agreement to the effect that in the event of death of the signer of the contract all remaining payments are automatically cancelled—if the account is not in arrears. The estate will receive promptly a receipt in full. Bereaved families would often lose the instrument they so highly prize but for the Club's Insurance feature. We have many grateful letters on file, commending this clause in the Club contract. It costs the member not one cent.

THE Great Event has Started! It's a festival of prices as well as of music. A remarkable opportunity for people to buy a high-grade Player piano for much less than the usual price. We have sacrificed most of our fair profit. The terms are so unusual, every home can now afford a musical instrument.

The instruments we are offering are not ordinary pianos. They are instruments of rare excellence and musical quality. Many of them contain the world-famous Standard Player Action—endorsed by many great music authorities. This remarkable action contains the Pneumatic Tracking Device—the "brain" of the player action the Flexible Striking Fingers which give the "human touch" to your playing; the Valve System which enables you to play the most difficult composition with the skill of a great artist.

CASH BONUS

Included in the special privileges is the BIG CASH BONUS. We make it equally fair to all by opening it up to all alike. The amount of cash any number of the CLUB pays over and above the first small payment on any instrument included in the Club will be immediately credited with 50 per cent additional up to $100. Coker Independents Get Second Victory, Defeating Reineckers of Pittsburg

Independents Win Applause of Fans in Staging Great Come-Back.

HOMESTEAD GRAYS NEXT

Overcoming an unearned three-run lead piled up by their opponents, the W. L. Reineckers of Pittsburg, in the first inning when Bretch misjudged a fly ball which would have been the third out, the Connellsville Independents on Saturday annexed the second victory of the season in as many games by a score of 6-4. The uphill battle of the Cokers demonstrated their superiority and the ability of the team to keep on until the end in the face of discouraging odds was pleasing to the fans.

The first two Reineckers at bat in the opening frame were quick and easy outs. The third drove a fly to middle and it was an easy out but Bretch misjudged the distance and the runner got on third. Before the Cokers became settled the score was 3-0. The Reineckers, full of pep with their early lead, quickly retired the side after Korb had connected with a hit by taking McKinley away with a fly ball followed by a double play.

The Cokers got one in the third, Bretch crossing the rubber after doubling, scoring on Korb's hit. In the fourth Corbett started off with a triple and scored when Yanchus dropped a hit in short right. Then Bloom doubled, also to right, and sent Stove to third. Bretch smacked a liner towards left center but Ryan, shortstop, reached out and nabbed the ball in the air.

Then "Hobo" Fisher, the only local boy on the club brought home the bacon for Connellsville by putting the team on a level with the visitors. With his trusty bludgeon he drove a high fly to left and the ball hit the fence only a foot from the top. Both runners scored, Fisher being held up at second. Kozar ended the inning by flying out.

The Cokers added another in the next frame when Korb opened with a double followed by Corbett's double. The sixth run was hung up in the eighth. Yanchus, who went to first after being hit by a pitched ball, scoring on a sacrifice by "Pep" Francis, who went into the game for Fisher.

TWO GAMES WITH HOMESTEAD GRAYS ON MEMORIAL DAY

Two games with the Homestead Grays will be played on Memorial Day at Fayette Field. In the morning the game will be at 10:30 o'clock and the second contest will be in the afternoon.

The Grays have become an annual attraction on Memorial Day and are a team the Cokers have a hard time beating. One victory has been scored by Connellsville over the team.

The Grays have been in the city ever since an independent team was organized. During the past two years the club has been the Memorial Day attraction.

Fans are delighted with the fighting club Connellsville has on the field this year and after Saturday's demonstration of strength lack of support should be something the directors need not worry about this season.

SCOTTDALE TEAM WINS OVER TURNERS; FOUR HOME RUNS

Special to The Courier.

SCOTTDALE, May 28.—Scottdale Independents took the second ball game of the season on Saturday afternoon in a game that lasted two and one half hours, by a score of 10 to 7 when they defeated the Turners of Wilkinsburg. Up until the sixth inning neither side had scored. Two home runs were made by each team.

The National Tubers of McKeesport will play a double header here Memorial Day.

At the Theatres

The Paramount

ONLY A SHOP GIRL showing today and tomorrow at this theatre presents a million dollar cast of nine stars including Estella Taylor Mae Busch Wallace Beery Willard Louis Tully Marshall and Baby Josephine Arai. Only a Shop Girl is a good old fashioned drama of 20 years ago but it is so solidly constructed and so well played by a great cast that there is little or no criticism to be made of it. The element of mystery and suspense is so well carried through that the story might have been written this year. It compares favorably with many more modern screen plays which have attempted things that men love well in Only a Shop Girl. The comic effects are perfect in every detail. The scene in the department store is especially true to life and effective and the fire which destroys the shop girl's home needs only the sirens of the fire engines and the pounding of the pumps to make it real. Its elevation to the silver sheet by far seeing producers speaks well for the future of the picture business for there is nothing cheap or flimsy in either the story or the method of its production.

Wednesday and Thursday Hoot Gibson will be seen in "Dead Game."

The Soisson

"ALL FOR A WOMAN" a First National picture featuring Lewis Stanning and Warren Kerrigan is the leading attraction today and tomorrow at this theatre. The story relates the part played in the revolution by George Jacques Danton who is portrayed by Lewis Stanings famed for his characterization of heroic roles. Allied at the start with Maximillian Robespierre the head of the band responsible for the Reign of Terror Danton becomes sickened by the constant blood letting, and deserts the clique denouncing it as an enemy of the people. Robespierre attempts to turn the people against Danton but the latter is such a popular idol that he fails in the attempt. Danton however not immune to the wiles of the other sex becomes enmeshed with a number of pretty women one of whom is eventually responsible for his downfall. The director with an eye for dramatic effect has produced a picture which starts rapidly and moves forward with ever increasing speed to a climax which is one of the most spectacular in the annals of the motion picture. But in addition to that he has selected a cast which is especially noteworthy and provided settings which are sumptuous and bewildering in their proportions.

Wednesday and Thursday Claire Windsor will appear in Fools First.

The Orpheum

MY AMERICAN WIFE a superb Spanish-American sport romance with Gloria Swanson the celebrated Paramount star in the leading role is the leading attraction today Tuesday and Wednesday at this theatre. Argentine land of the tango and charming senoritas is the scene of Miss Swanson's latest Paramount picture. Miss Swanson in the role of Natalie Chester a Kentucky girl with a passion for racing has fallen in love with a Spanish nobleman (Antonio Moreno) whom she has met at the races. The outcome of the love affair remains hidden up to the final fade out because of the interesting plot involving the three principal players Miss Swanson Mr. Moreno and the rascally Pedro de Grossa played by Geno Corrado. Many weeks have elapsed since so delightful a picture has been exhibited at this theatre. The most recent one was another of Sam Wood's productions starring Miss Swanson. "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew." "My American Wife" however excels in beauty and interest this splendid production and is sure to pack the theatre throughout the three days of its run.

Thursday Friday and Saturday Jack Holt and Wanda Hawley will be seen in "Nobody's Money."

EDITH DAY, MUSICAL COMEDY FAVORITE, AND PAT SOMERSET, ENGLISH ACTOR, WHO AT LAST AND END INDIVIDUAL DIVORCE FETES.

GREENWICH, CONN.—Each having passed through divorce ordeals, Pat Somerset and Edith Day slipped away from New York and were married here two days after the previous divorce made Clark Carlton became effective.

Theatrical circles are quieter now. The consent of Carlton to have Somerset deported to England, because of alleged "mouth courtship" in his relations with Miss Day, also now forgotten.

The couples now happily united, began two years ago in London where Miss Day was starred and Somerset was her leading man. The actor's wife obtained a divorce, naming the actress as co-respondent.

"Git back, Bill, git back!" he roared "Git back!"

With one lunge Stillwell shoved Stewart and Nick and the other cowboys upon the porch. Then he crowded Madeline and Alfred and Florence to the wall, tried to force them farther. His motions were rapid and stern. But failing to get them through door and window, he planted his wife, arms between the women and danger. Madeline grasped his arm, held on and peered fearfully from behind his broad shoulder.

"Yes, Hawe! Yes. Speed!" called Monty, in that same wild voice. "Don't you move a finger or an eyelash!"

Madeline's shoulder served to keep thrilling distraction. She grasped the relation between Monty's terrible cry and the strange but definite posture he had assumed.

"Now, git in there, you fool Monty, and all the time he never shifted his intent gaze as much as a hair's breadth from Hawe and his victim. "Nels, chase away them two fellers hangin' back there. Chase 'em quick!"

These men, the two desperadoes who had remained in the background with the pack horses, did not wait for Nels. They spurred their mounts whistled, and galloped away.

"Now, Nels, cut the gurl loose," ordered Monty.

Nels ran forward, jerked the halter out of Sneed's hand and pulled Bonita's horse in close to the porch. As he slit the rope which bound her she fell into his arms.

"Hawe, git down!" went on Monty. "Face front an' stiff!"

The sheriff swung his leg, and never moving his hands, with his face now a deathly, sickening white, he slid to the ground.

"Line up there beside your guerrilla pard. There. You two make a d—n fine picture, a d—n fine team of dizened coyote an' a cross between a wild mule an' a Greaser. Now listen!"

Monty made a lunging turn in which his breathing was plainly audible.

Madeline's eyes were riveted upon Monty. Her mind, swift as lightning, had perceived the subtleties in action and word. Even in the frenzy of the men Violence stared. Violence the thing she had tried to avoid, she had feared the most. In her sought to eliminate it. Now it was about to be enacted before her eyes. It had come at last. She had not still. Would Neil, the indomitable Stewart, cut the fatal blow? Terrible Monty Price, who was as it were out of hell, spoke with a voice and no gesture of his hands could stay his hand. With eyes slowly blazing red she watched. She listened with thrumming ears. She waited slowly, unflinching, against Bill Hawe.

"Hawe, if you an' your pet lover-boy don't hand me some hunk of your listen an' listen hard," said Monty. "For I'm goin' to contrive a new style lost to hell with you. You all fun, but way on your nerve didn't you? Now who? You roll in here like a mad bear an' talk on your badge an' talk in them almost huff away with it. You heard all about Miss Woman an' a whey outfit stopped a bullet an' on skin packin' me. They're goin' to fight an' decent livin' an' sure they'll be easy to double up drive to jail. Hawe, listen. This was a perfect able an' beautiful woman in the act of the Fate somewhere an' she brought out of her a bitter many an' a shock of the days of crowds a while to be a whole thing. Well, I'll by at down out the hands of her self an' a woman. This girl's a child an' a girl, but a woman. Do you get it? Now, Hawe, you're a child with pain an' a man, now we what we of it. Bonita's come in at the lady we fellers be on an' love in rev a man an' you get H—ll's life."

With a talking on in form he at the round Monty Price ceased low bar. [illegible] and stood [illegible] Sneed [illegible] out [illegible]

Madeline saw them only in the blurred circle of her sight. They re assembled specter. She heard the shrill whistle of a horse and recognized Majesty calling her from the corral.

"Let's all!" sweated Monty, in a voice now strangling. Lower and lower he bent a terrible figure of ferocity. "Now, both you armed officers of the law, come on! Flash your guns! Throw 'em an' be quick. Marty Price is done! There'll be daylight through you both before you fan a hammer! But I'm givin' you a chance to stop me. I'm actin' outside the law, an' my way is the old law."

His breath came quicker, his voice grew hoarse, and he crouched lower. A [illegible] body great in its bold muscularity with a wonderful masculine [illegible]

"Do it, Sneed! Buzzards! Flash them guns, or I'll flash mine! Aha!"

To Madeline it seemed the three stiff crouching men leaped into instant and violent action. She saw streaks of fire, streaks of smoke. Then a crashing volley deafened her. It ceased as quickly. Smoke veiled. So seemed. Slowly it drifted away to disclose three fallen men, one of whom Monty, leaned on his left hand, a smoking gun in his right. He watched for a movement from the other two. It did not come. Then with a terrible smile he slid each and stretched out.

CHAPTER XIX

Unbridled.

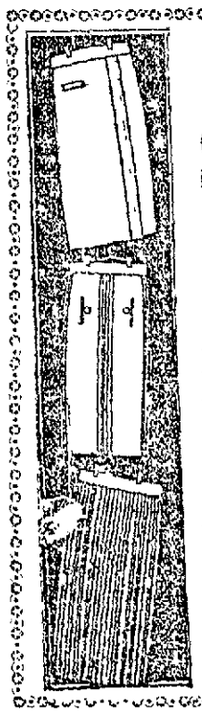

In waking and sleeping hours Madeline Hammond could not release herself from the thralling memory of that tragedy. She was haunted by Monty Price's terrible smile. Only in action of some kind could she escape and to that end she worked, she walked and rode. She even overcame a strong feeling which she feared was unreasonable disgust for the Mexican girl Bonita who lay ill at the ranch. Bonita needed her. Bonita in need of skilful nursing.

One afternoon she rode down to the alfalfa fields, round them, and back up to the spillway at the lower lake, where a group of mesquite trees, owing to the water that seeped through the wall to their roots, had taken on black and heavy colors. Like [illegible] these trees there was shade enough to make a pleasant place to linger on a hot disheartened decided to rest a little.

ABE MARTIN On Topics o' th' Day

Watch charms are almost things o' th' past, 'cept we see a few elk teeth an' other lodge jewelry danglin' from fobs an' chains occasionally. But ther wuz a time when nearly ever' feller that wuz able t' own a watch an' chain wuz weighted down with a cumbersome watch charm. Ther wuz ever conceivable sort o' charms t' be seen, from a little basket carved from a peach seed up t' costly diamond-studded seals. Durin' th' period watch charms wuz goin' big long curly hair wuz th' rage, vests wuz very long, alligator shoes bear'd off, bell bottomed trousers, cuff holder, shirt-riddin' neckties, plug hats an' curled mustaches wuz very common. Not a few blades parted ther hair behind. But th' big outstandin' feature o' ever' feller in fair circumstances wuz his watch charm. No matter what a feller's business wuz, he could buy a watch charm t' suit it. Loafers without any business usually had massive rolled plate lookets, with pictures o' burlesque queens in 'em. Young dudes jest startin' out in life went in fer lockets too, an' put ther girls pictures in 'em. After a feller worked up t' a livery stable he bought a gold horse in action. A mounted tiger claw wuz pop'lar among circus men, while a nifty gold barrel set off th' saloon-keeper. Very few newspaper people owned watches, but we recall a journalist who wore a miniature gold ink bottle he bought with money he earned in a sawmill before he begun t' write fer th' press. When we recall some o' th' fellers that used t' stand around th' past office corner on Sunday afternoon we think th' men o' t'day dress very modestly. Shoes an' boots still squeaked as late as 1883 an' we could hear a full-rigged dude o' that period comin' nearly four blocks away, an' if th' wind wuz right we could catch th' odor o' bear's oil an' bergamot. Th' clankin' o heavy watch chains an' charms, th' squeaky shoes, rattlin' cuffs, an' th' unoiled pulleys o' numerous shoulder braces destroyed th' quiet o th' Sabbath afternoon. Sometimes school would have t' shut down till some sweller passed th' buildin', an' ther wuz an unwritten law again' leavin' a theatre or courtroom in th' midst of a show or trial. Sometimes if a feller had a wife he really cared anything about he'd have a watch chain made of her hair. Sometimes ther'd be as many as three o' these chains in one single community, but they wuz by no means common. Th' old time dandy with his jewelry an' musk an' overheated suspenders an' perfumed pomade an' gold tooth pick an' cane an' silk handkerchief an' button hole bouquet an cigar holder an' hair oil an thick red underwear wuz fer an' away ahead o' anything we're up again t'day in th' way o' undesirables.
